Night on an American Desert. I know of nothing in the world more melancholly than those vast solitudes seen on a fine summer's night, when the moon, shining in the midst of the stars, sends forth the reflections of its silvery light over the boundless plain. The view is lost in a pale lwilight, with out echo; a light, transparent mist hovers in the space. Scorpions, in crawling along, make their scales creak; large green and yellow lizards move along in the burnt grass. The melodious murning of the flowing waters is nowhere heard, nor the joyful rustling of the leaves. The birds, having no branches whereon to rest, enliven not the air with their songs; the breeze whispers not in the foliage; no hing disturbs the silent of the cricket. This silence oppresent of the rustless. The silence oppresent of the cricket. This silence oppresent of the cricket. This silence oppresent in the foliage; no hing disturbs the silent of the cricket. The cricket is the content of t stars, sends forth the reflections of its the foliage; no hing disturbs the silent of night unless it be the monotoneus critical the cricical. This silence oppresses, overwhelms you, like the thought of the infinite. You fancy yourself in a shroud of crape which envelopes the whole world; for life is only revealed by the twinking of the stars, movement is only manifested by the motion of the motion of the moon, pursuing its tranquil course through the celestial spheres. Nature seems plunged in an awful slumber, distant, mysterious, full of sadness and pain, like the sleep of the dead in the pressuing the foreign the passing the foreign monor of the dead in the pressuing the foreign monor of the celestial spheres. Manhood, How Lost, How Restored.

Just Published, in a Scaled Envelope. BY BOB. J. CULVERWELL, M. D.

The important fact that the awful consequences of solf-abuse may be effectually removed without internal medicines or the dangerous applications of caustes, instrumen a, medicated bougles, and other empirical devices, is been clearly demonstrat dead the entirely new and highly successful treatment, as adopted by the celebrated author, fully explained, by means of which every one is enabled to care himself perfectly, and at the tenatrosable cost, thereby avoiding all the advertised nontrums of the day. This becture will prove a boon to thomsands. Sent under seal to my actives, on the receipt of two postage saturps, by addressing Dr. CHAS J. C. KLINE, 450 First Avenue, New York, Po t. Rox, 4,650.
